A New Mining Fever Comm; There are indications that an era of speculation in gold mining stocks is rapidly approaching. The great cheapening of silver has directed renewed attention to the most precions of metals, and there has been a remarkable increase in its production during the past year. Cheaper and botter machinery has been invented, and new and more effective processes of treating ores are being constantly discovered. In consequence mines that were long ago abandoned as worthiess have been reopened, and new ones are being located everywhere in the gold bearing regions. Under the new order of things a great deal more captal is required, and since comparatively few individuals can be found able or willing to take the risk of mining inestments stock companies must be formed. The result may soon be that the market will be flooded with mining curities. - Louisville Courier-Journal
